ABOUT THIS BOOK:

What does an ordinary citizen with zero position, power or money, do when he sees something wrong or unjust? What money or position can a person have, whose father slept his first night on a street in Amritsar, with a brick as a pillow when he lost his parents, at the age of 26, when India was born in 1947? This dilemma confronts millions of common citizens.

Over the last 50 years, I raised issues of public concern through Letters to the Editors, wherever I lived. The deprivations of slum dwellers in India, Latin America and South Asia, poverty in villages in Africa and India, trauma of refugees, the role of religion, caste, and skin-colour to seek power, plight of orphans of Syria, all mauled my soul.

My letters covered the holiness of Mahatma Gandhi, vision of President John Kennedy, sagacity of Mrs. Indira Gandhi, guts of President George Bush, melancholies of Mr. Saddam Hussein, nobility of Mr. Martin Luther King, steadiness of President Obama, anguishes of Ms. Aung San Suu Kyi, throbbing pain and love of Doctor Zhivago in Lara's poem, the artists in Mr. Raj Kapoor, Mr. Rajesh Khanna, Mr. Al Pacino, Mr. Robert De Niro, Mr. Sean Connery & Ms. Meryl Streep, the talent of Tiger Woods & Roger Federer.

The over 1,000 Letters to Editor selected for this book, provide a panoramic and historical sweep of the last 50 years through words of a commoner. I hope this Book will inspire ordinary citizens like me, to make their apprehensive voices heard. Even one voice, a simple word, can make a difference. We can Never Give Up. Ever.
